CHURCH COURT, 2d CIRCUIT, HAWAII, SEPTEMBER TERM, 1908.

The Court sat at 10 o'clock, with Chief Justice Allen, and Circuit Judges Hart and Nalapakal on the bench. The following cases were disposed of:

Rex vs. Kalaiki—Assault with a deadly weapon. The prisoner having been committed to the Insane Asylum, the case was continued.

Rex vs. Hui—House-breaking and Larceny. The prisoner was charged with breaking and entering the office of Messrs. Janion, Green & Co., at Onoulini, South Kona, and stealing therefrom four countess boxes. Verdict, guilty. Prisoner's counsel filed motion in arrest of judgment, which was argued and overruled. The counsel then took exceptions to the Supreme Court. The prisoner was sentenced to three years' imprisonment.

W. C. Jones, Esq., for the prisoner.
Rex vs. Hui, Mookahole, Kaawa, Kaha, Keenaua, Pualu, Kalamahai and Nalapakal—Drunkennes. Appeal from Circuit Judge. The Attorney-General entered a Nol. Pro.

The following cases were continued until next term, on account of the absence of one of the principal witnesses for the Crown, who was unable to attend by reason of sickness: Rex vs. Pomaki, Naeapahu, Kamea, Paa, Wela, and Kellike—Manufacturing intoxicating liquors; and Rex vs. Aa—Furnishing intoxicating liquor. Appeals from Circuit Judge.

The following indictments were presented, and continued to Hilo: Rex vs. S. W. Case—Assault with a deadly weapon; Pukaiki—Assault with intent to commit rape; Kaula—Perjury, and Kamaka—Perjury.

SATURDAY AFTERNOON AT THE FISH MARKET.—Saturday afternoon is the time to see the native population of Honolulu, especially the female portion, out in full force. From four o'clock until sundown, the space devoted to fish and meat stalls, makal of the iron foundry, is crowded with customers, chaffing and bargaining for their Saturday night's and Sunday's supply of fish. The dealers, standing behind their tables, are loud in publishing the fine qualities and cheapness of their wares, which consist of fish of many varieties that have a familiar look to the foreign eye, and many more that are quite strange in shape and color; live crawfish, with their projecting eyes, crawling about the board; green looking sea-eggs, with their yellow or red contents; silny, disgusting looking squid; shell fish, such as oysters and oysters; piles of limu, or sea-weed, the smell of which is anything but attractive; and so forth. At the beef stalls near by, huge chunks of meat, tripe, liver and "all sorts," are being sold by the rial's worth, while a monster hog, hot from the oven, is retailed piecemeal, so much a piece. Meantime the road leading to the market is lined with itinerant dealers in roasted shrimps, potatoes, taro, tobacco, wooden pipes, kava, or wrattle, and in fact everything that the native appetite or fancy may incline to. All this while the crowds of gaily dressed native women and gals dressed men are passing to and fro, making their purchases, and the jungle of "hard cash" sounds on the boards, mingled with the ceaseless hum of voices, in which one can only distinguish the words "hapaia" and "hapaia."

NATIVE KAHUNA.—It would appear that the police are determined to suppress, if possible, the mischievous—not to say murderous—practices of the native kahuna or doctors. Several convictions have been had under the Act of the last session to establish a Hawaiian Board of Health. The section under which the prosecutions are brought, reads as follows:

"SEC. 6. Any native Hawaiian who shall practice medicine without having obtained a license, as hereinafter provided, shall, upon conviction thereof before a Police or District Justice, be fined in a sum not less than twenty nor more than one hundred dollars."

Under this law one kahuna has been fined one hundred dollars, another fifty, and another twenty, by Police Magistrate Montgomery. The prescription of one of these worthless for a patient suffering from what appeared to have been inflammatory rheumatism, was a drastic purge, and total abstinence from food and drink for the space of five days! The poor victim at the end of the third day begged that he might be allowed a little pot and water. This was denied, and by the time the five days had expired, the man could not swallow, and died on the eighth day after the doctor commenced to practice on him. It is certainly high time that these murderous practices should be stopped, and it is gratifying to see that the Police and the Court are fully awake to the importance of a strict enforcement of the law.

WATER-CURT.—The watering of the streets is being prosecuted very diligently by Messrs. Ward & Collins, who have taken up the business. They work as if they comprehended the situation, and meant to give satisfaction to the subscribers. By removing the loose and friable dirt—a necessary preliminary to their work—they will soon reduce the sprinkling more effective, with even less water than they now use. The effect in cooling the air is very noticeable, and very agreeable. The self-imposed tax for this water-cart is very cheerfully borne by the property holders benefited by its operation, but possibly would cause a loud grumble, if the town had a municipal organization, and the tax were imposed through its Board. It was proposed, in the last Assembly, to light the streets by a local tax, but the Honolulu taxpayers did not see it in that light, and the item was thrown out. We are not quite ready to be a city yet!

COMMISSIONERS OF THE PENAL LAWS.—The Commissioners appointed under the Act of the last session to compile the Penal Statutes of the Kingdom, have been engaged in their duties during the past several weeks. Their work was very much retarded, and when completed will be a very valuable assistance to all connected with the Courts and the administration of justice. At present, there are so many penal provisions in the Civil Code, and there have been so many amendments made to the latter by successive legislatures, that it requires no little study to know what the laws really are, in some instances. The Civil Code, promulgated in 1892, nearly ten years ago, and the necessity is becoming daily apparent of a re-codification.

THE BRIG KANAKAHUA.—F. is in Foster & Co.'s hands, who are putting new spars in her. The few days that she was without masts or bowsprit, so changed her appearance, that she was beyond recognition by ordinary observers. She is to be put in thorough repair, and will be ready for her next trip to the Guano Islands by the 1st of October. She cruises through the equatorial regions, meeting intense heat and copious rains, which are hard upon wood, and it was found that her masts and spars were much weakened through decay. The brig is a good sailer, and with spars and rigging in prime order, Capt. Hickman will be able to report other quick passages besides his last one.

Disastrous Termination of a Grand Scientific Experiment.

The following amusing account of the trial of a new invention, which we copy from the Alta, has an irresistible pathos in its connection with the destroyed hopes and rudely broken dreams of the inventor. The laugh of the million is woven out of the sorrows of the one most undressed by the experiment.

Some time since, a detailed account was given in the Alta, of a combination boat, or three boats lashed together, tandem style, or so to form one boat, which, by the simple action of the inventor, could be raised or lowered at will, and could be used in shallow water—but a good, honest voyage outside, on "the sea, the sea, the deep blue sea," etc., etc., etc., and with a limited supply of liquid refreshments for a ten days' voyage were taken on board, ballast was put in, and at ebb tide the new contrivance of the sea put to the test. The inventor, Capt. Meigs, of the Wharf, and two sailors—being on board. She was hardly clear of the wharf when she swung round, broadside to the tide, and commenced wobbling and ducking in a most unpromisingly perverse manner, refusing to obey the helm at all. Occasionally she would lurch so heavily that her wheel-house would be submerged, and she would be forced to throw on shore for those on board. She made very good time floating with the tide, despite the fact that she was broadside to the tide, but she did not give the boat any additional speed. The fact was soon apparent to those on shore that the old experiment of a man standing in a wash-bowl and holding himself up by the hair, was being held in the hands, was being repeated in a different form. The motive power being in the water, not the boat, as a matter of course the wheels would move with the water, and not through it. The inventor was not overboard, but he was in a most uncomfortable position, and he was in a most uncomfortable position, and he was in a most uncomfortable position.
